

Employer: Utah State Historic Preservation Office, Antiquities Section

Utah State History's mission is to preserve and share the past for a better present and future. As a state agency, they provide services, technical assistance, and information to many different businesses, industries, agencies, and individuals.

Responsibilities:

The successful applicant will have the opportunity to work with the Utah Division of State History to enhance digital records associated with the state's archaeological inventory. Working closely with historic preservation professionals, interns will learn about the process of cultural resource management, and gain hands-on experience working with archaeological site records and reports.

Training:

Basic coursework in archaeology and/or historic preservation required. Introductory level training in GIS preferred. Additional training provided on site.

Location:

300 S. Rio Grande Street, Salt Lake City, Utah 84101

Contact:

Dr. Brian Coddling, Department of Anthropology (brian.coddling@anthro.utah.edu)